

FREELANCING STARTER GUIDE

Turn one useful skill into a clear offer, find suitable clients and deliver your first paid project professionally.

01 CHOOSE

One buyer. One problem. One offer.

02 PROVE

Relevant samples and a useful pitch.

03 DELIVER

Clear scope, payment and handover.

30-DAY PLAN • SCRIPTS • TEMPLATES • WORKSHEETS

An India-first field guide for beginners, students, creators and young professionals.

START HERE

Your first project is a system

Work through one service, one suitable buyer, one small project and a reliable delivery process.

What this month is for

Make two relevant samples, develop a clear offer, identify suitable buyers, start useful conversations and rehearse a complete project workflow. A paid client may arrive in the first month, but the 30-day plan is a sequence of actions rather than an earnings promise.

REALITY CHECK

Freelancing includes unpaid sales time, revisions, administration and uncertain demand. A quoted fee is not take-home income. Start alongside study or employment where permitted, protect essential savings and purchase tools only when work requires them.

Read, do, then use the templates

- Pages 4-9 help you choose a service, create evidence and calculate a fee.
- Pages 10-16 guide prospecting, discovery, proposals and written scope.
- Pages 17-23 cover payment, records, delivery, review and a 30-day action plan.

The labels used throughout

Verified facts about platforms or official guidance use numbered sources. Recommendations are LEARNORA working methods, not universal rules. All sample prices, businesses, hours and calculations are Illustrative Examples. No client story, success rate or result is implied.

01 / CHOOSE

Start with a deliverable

A client can buy a finished piece of work more easily than an undefined promise to “help with marketing”.

ABILITY	SMALL SERVICE	POSSIBLE BUYER
Clear writing	Rewrite five product descriptions from supplied facts	Small online retailer
Visual layout	Design six static posts using an existing brand kit	Local store
Video editing	Edit three short clips from client-supplied footage	Creator or trainer
Spreadsheets	Clean one customer list and flag duplicates	Service business
Website basics	Update copy and images on three existing pages	Business with a website

Choose with four filters

Ability: Can you produce an acceptable draft? Access: Can you reach buyers? Clarity: Can both parties agree when it is complete? Risk: Can you deliver responsibly without making claims or taking access beyond your competence?

ONE-HOUR EXERCISE

Try a tiny sample for two candidate services. Compare the quality, difficulty and how clearly you can explain your choices. Select the stronger service for the next 30 days; you can expand later.

Do not offer guaranteed ad performance, search rankings, legal outcomes or security-sensitive work you cannot competently perform. Narrow the deliverable or seek supervision.

02 / POSITION

Make one offer easy to buy

A useful offer describes the buyer, deliverable, boundary, timing and next step in plain English.

OFFER FORMULA

I help [buyer type] with [specific need] by delivering [count + format + scope] within [time after inputs arrive]. The package includes [revision allowance] and excludes [key extras].

Illustrative Example: clothing-store content

"I create six static Instagram posts for independent clothing stores using your product photos and brand colours. You receive six PNG files and six short captions within five working days after all inputs arrive. One consolidated revision round is included. Photography, posting and paid ads are separate."

VAGUE	CLEARER
I will grow your business.	I will prepare six posts with readable product details and enquiry prompts.
Unlimited edits.	One consolidated revision round within the approved concept.
Fast delivery.	First draft by an agreed date after receiving all listed inputs.

Check for misunderstanding

Show the offer to a potential buyer. Ask: "What would you expect to receive? What is unclear? What information is missing before you could decide?" Rewrite the offer before making more samples.

MY BUYER AND THEIR NEED

MY DELIVERABLE AND MAIN EXCLUSION

03 / PRACTISE

Build skill through a brief

A sample is more convincing when it reflects the constraints and checks in real client work.

Practice brief: a fictional retail store

Create six product posts and captions. The fictional store supplies six photos, product names, approved prices and a logo. Use invented store details and label the portfolio piece “Self-initiated concept”.

CHECK	PASS CONDITION
Message	Each post communicates one product and one next action.
Visual quality	Product remains visible; text can be read on a phone.
Accuracy	Names and prices match the practice brief.
Delivery	Six exports, six captions and one preview sheet.
Explanation	You can explain three design or copy choices.

Three passes

- Make: Complete the first draft and record total time, including research and export.
- Inspect: Apply the checklist and ask someone what is confusing. Seek concrete feedback.
- Improve: Correct weak spots, prepare a handover note and repeat with a different brief.

READY-TO-SELL TEST

Can you repeat the process, estimate the effort, correct an error and explain the final output without asking the buyer to teach you? If not, reduce the scope and practise the missing step.

04 / PROOF

A portfolio is evidence

Two strong and well-explained samples can show more than a gallery of unexplained visuals.

Give each sample context

- Brief: Who is it for, and what was required?
- Constraints: Which inputs, deadlines or brand rules shaped your choices?
- Output: Show the usable final deliverable.
- Reasoning: Explain two or three decisions in everyday language.
- Status: State “self-initiated concept”, “practice project” or approved client work.

SAMPLE PORTFOLIO CAPTION

Self-initiated concept for a fictional clothing store. I designed six product posts from an invented brief. A consistent price area helps readers scan the collection. This is a practice project; it makes no claim about sales or a client engagement.

A minimum portfolio page

Use a simple PDF or view-only page: one offer statement, two relevant projects, an outline of your process, the included deliverables and one contact method. Open the link in a signed-out browser to check access.

DO	AVOID
Use your own or suitably licensed assets.	Copying a competitor’s work or confidential client materials.
Request consent before publishing client work.	Inventing testimonials, logos, sales figures or before-and-after results.

Check permission for photos, fonts, music, software templates and client data before including them in a portfolio or final deliverable.

Calculate before you quote

A fee needs to cover production, communication and corrections. The amounts below are hypothetical assumptions, not market rates.

WORK COMPONENT	HOURS
Brief review and communication	1
Production	4
Quality check and exports	1
Included revision round	1
Total planned project time	7

Illustrative Example: a fixed fee

Assume an internal planning rate of ₹500 per hour and ₹300 of project-specific costs. $\text{Base} = 7 \times ₹500 + ₹300 = ₹3,800$. Add a chosen ₹700 contingency and the direct-client quote is ₹4,500 before applicable taxes. The internal rate and contingency are choices for this illustration.

Check channel costs separately

If a hypothetical channel keeps 10% of the quoted fee, collecting ₹4,500 before other deductions requires $₹4,500 \div 0.90 = ₹5,000$. Use the actual contract fee, and account for conversion, withdrawal charges and taxes where relevant.

Compare the estimate with reality

If the ₹4,500 project takes 12 total hours and ₹300 direct costs, the remaining $₹4,200 \div 12 = ₹350$ per hour before tax and overhead. Record prospecting and admin time too. Better scoping and fewer meetings can improve the economics.

PRICE BY SCOPE

If the buyer has less budget, reduce the deliverables. For uncertain work, propose a paid discovery phase or an hourly arrangement with a written cap. Do not silently include unlimited revisions.

06 / PACKAGE

Sell a small paid pilot

A pilot tests whether the deliverable and working relationship fit. It should be valuable even if there is no larger project.

PACKAGE	SCOPE	ILLUSTRATIVE FEE
Pilot	3 static posts + 3 captions; one concept; one revision round	₹2,500
Project	6 static posts + 6 captions; one concept; one revision round	₹4,500
Monthly batch	12 posts + 12 captions in two batches; one round per batch	₹8,500

Illustrative Example only, before applicable taxes. Assumes the client provides approved photos, product facts and brand kit. Photography, posting, video, ad management and extra languages are excluded. Calculate your own price before using a package.

Explain why a pilot helps

“We can test the visual direction and review process with three posts before discussing a larger batch.” The pilot is paid. Do not create a complete client-ready project as a free test.

BUDGET RESPONSE

Thanks for sharing the budget. The six-post package is ₹4,500. For ₹2,500, I can offer three posts and captions with one revision round, using the same supplied assets. Which scope is more useful right now?

Decline the wrong work

Step away if the buyer demands a guaranteed business outcome, misleading content, unbounded changes, access you cannot manage or a service beyond your competence. Explain briefly and professionally.

Choose where to find buyers

Use one primary and one secondary route in the first month. Review qualified conversations, not time spent browsing.

ROUTE	USE	TRADE-OFF
Warm network	Ask for permission-based introductions.	Small pool; agree scope in writing.
Direct outreach	Contact businesses with a relevant, observable need.	You manage vetting, payment and follow-up.
Upwork	Apply to matching project briefs.	Contract fees and platform rules.
Fiverr	Show a packaged deliverable.	Platform-based discovery and order workflow.

Verified platform facts

Upwork's official help lists a freelancer service fee of 0%-15% per contract; check the fee shown on your own offer. Its fixed-price payment protection is conditional, including a funded milestone and proper submission, rather than an unconditional payment promise. [1, 2]

Fiverr's official earnings guidance states that completed orders credit freelancers with 80% of the purchase amount, including extras and tips, before taxes and other applicable costs. [3]

CHOOSE DELIBERATELY

For direct work, test one buyer and one offer. On a marketplace, pursue briefs matching your proof. Read current payment and communication rules before acting; do not assume a direct-client workflow is allowed on a platform.

Platform facts checked 28 September 2026. This book does not require a paid subscription or application purchase. Features, fees and terms can change.

Build a qualified shortlist

A useful prospect has a plausible need, an appropriate contact and work you can genuinely deliver.

A focused research session

- Choose one buyer group. Inspect public business websites and professional profiles.
- Find one specific observation, such as product information scattered across images and captions.
- Locate a suitable public business contact method. Do not collect private numbers or mass-message people.
- Record why your service fits. If you cannot explain the fit in one sentence, skip the business.

TRACK	ILLUSTRATIVE ENTRY
Business and source	Fictional boutique; public business website.
Observed need	Product information is hard to scan.
Offer fit	Six posts with a repeated product-details area.
Evidence	One clearly labelled retail concept.
Status	Not contacted; draft a short message.

Qualify in conversation

A polished page does not prove budget; a busy page does not prove payment reliability. Ask about the actual project, decision-maker, timeline and budget before producing a detailed proposal.

OPERATING RECOMMENDATION

In a focused session, research five suitable businesses and approach only those with a clear fit. This is a workflow suggestion, not a conversion benchmark. Record “do not contact” requests and honour them.

09 / OUTREACH

Start a useful conversation

The first message should show relevance, define the small service and invite an easy reply.

DIRECT EMAIL OR PROFESSIONAL MESSAGE

Hi [name], I noticed [specific factual observation] on [business/page]. I create [small deliverable] for [buyer type]. Here is a relevant [sample link], labelled as a concept. Would a short outline for [specific need] be useful? If not relevant, no problem. - [your name]

WARM INTRODUCTION

Hi [name], I'm offering [specific service] for [buyer type]. Here is [relevant sample link]. If someone you know is already looking for this, would you be comfortable introducing us? Please check with them before sharing their contact details.

MARKETPLACE OPENING

You need [deliverable] using [constraint from the brief]. I can prepare [specific scope], and my attached [sample] is relevant. I would begin with [action]. Before confirming price and timing, could you clarify [important missing detail]?

Follow up respectfully

As a recommendation, send one short follow-up after roughly four or five working days, then a final close-out about a week later if appropriate. Adjust to platform rules and stop if the person declines or opts out.

FOLLOW-UP

Hi [name], following up on the [deliverable] idea. My sample shows [one relevant detail]. Is this something you are considering, or should I close the loop for now?

Avoid fabricated familiarity, guilt, pressure, unrequested attachments and unsupported claims that a business is failing.

10 / DISCOVERY

Ask before recommending

A short call helps establish whether the work, budget and decision process fit.

QUESTION	WHY IT MATTERS
What needs to be different after this project?	Reveals the actual purpose.
Which files, formats and channels do you need?	Defines deliverables.
What approved inputs exist?	Shows missing information or extra work.
Who gives final feedback and approval?	Prevents conflicting instructions.
What deadline matters, and why?	Distinguishes launch needs from preferences.
What budget range is set aside?	Tests whether useful scope can fit.

Read back what you heard

CALL RECAP

My understanding is [problem]. You need [deliverables], using [inputs], by [date]. [Name] will approve the work. I'll send a proposal by [date] with price, exclusions and payment stages. What have I missed?

Choose the right next step

Proceed when the work and budget fit. Reduce scope when the buyer needs a smaller package. Decline or refer if the work requires claims, access or skills you cannot responsibly provide.

Keep your promise within your competence. The client should approve factual product or service claims before publication.

Give the buyer a clear decision

The proposal should make the deliverables, conditions and next step understandable without a second meeting.

ONE-PAGE PROPOSAL TEMPLATE

Project: [client + name]

Objective: [intended use]

Included: [quantity, formats, language, dimensions and concepts]

Excluded: [important extras]

Client inputs: [assets, facts, access and date]

Schedule: [draft, feedback and final dates; input dependency]

Fee: [currency + amount + applicable tax treatment]

Payment: [advance or funded milestone + balance trigger]

Revisions: [rounds and their definition]

Approval: [reviewer + acceptance criteria]

Next step: [written acceptance + agreement + payment]

Answer objections with a useful choice

CLIENT SAYS	RESPONSE
Can you make it cheaper?	We can reduce [deliverables]. Which output matters most?
Can you guarantee sales?	I can commit to the agreed deliverables and quality checks. Sales depend on other factors too.
Can you start today?	I can confirm a start date once the scope, inputs and initial payment are in place.

For sensitive, high-value or cross-border work, a qualified professional can help with suitable contractual terms.

Define a revision clearly

A revision improves agreed work. A new concept, extra deliverable or changed objective may require a new quote.

ITEM	ILLUSTRATIVE BOUNDARY
Deliverables	Six static posts, 1080 × 1350 px PNG, plus six English captions.
Client inputs	Approved logo, images, prices, product facts and brand colours.
Included revision	One consolidated list adjusting the approved concept.
Excluded	New concept, video, photography, posting and extra languages.
Approval criteria	Correct number, format, readability and supplied facts.
Timing	Five working days after complete inputs; delayed feedback shifts dates.

Make changes explicit

CHANGE-REQUEST SCRIPT

Happy to add [new request]. It falls outside our agreed [scope]. The additional fee is [amount] and the revised date is [date]. I can continue with the original scope or add this once you approve the revised fee and timing in writing.

Maintain one decision trail

Send a written recap after calls and voice notes. Keep one approved brief, a dated change log and one person who consolidates feedback. If the client changes approved product information, record the new input and any timeline impact.

When the feedback is “make it better”, ask which part is not working, for whom and what needs to change. Clarify before producing alternatives.

Write down the working rules

Use this educational checklist for direct projects; it is not a substitute for a tailored legal agreement.

AGREE ON	QUESTIONS TO RESOLVE
Parties and scope	Correct identities? Which version of the proposal controls?
Fee and payment	Currency, taxes, advance, milestones, due dates and expenses?
Timing and feedback	When are inputs due? Who approves? What happens after a delay?
Changes and cancellation	How are extras agreed? What is payable for completed work?
Ownership and licences	Which rights and final files transfer, and when?
Confidentiality and access	Who may access data? How is it stored or removed?
Disputes and termination	How are problems escalated and the work ended?

Clarify rights and files

Decide whether editable source files are included and when final usage rights take effect. Identify pre-existing templates, fonts and stock assets whose licences may limit transfer. Do not promise ownership of material you do not own.

START CONDITION

Confirm written acceptance, the agreed advance or funded milestone, complete inputs and a named approver. Use the platform's own agreement and payment workflow whenever its rules require it.

Get paid with a clear trail

Agree on money before production, and verify the actual credit rather than relying on a screenshot.

Illustrative Example: staged direct payment

For a ₹4,500 project, the parties could agree ₹2,250 before work and ₹2,250 after approving a review preview but before final-file release. These are sample terms, not a rule. Put cancellation and any refund treatment in the agreement; an advance is not automatically non-refundable.

- Match payment against your bank or provider record, invoice amount and payer.
- For UPI, do not share your PIN. A PIN is used to authorise sending money; receiving a standard payment does not require you to enter it. [4]
- For cross-border work, confirm provider availability, KYC, conversion, fees and settlement before agreeing a method. Keep the remittance records.

WARNING SIGN	NEXT STEP
Pay a security fee to unlock a job.	Verify independently; do not send money to secure work.
Share an OTP or install an unknown app.	Decline and verify through an established channel.
Refund an unexplained overpayment elsewhere.	Contact your bank or provider before acting.
Begin before a platform milestone is funded.	Check funding and protection requirements. [2]

For overdue payment, cite the invoice, amount and agreed date. Pause further work in line with the agreement and use the appropriate dispute channel. Preserve the communication trail.

Keep records from the first rupee

Organised evidence helps with payment follow-up, profitability and professional tax advice.

Keep one simple invoice and records pack

Record invoice number and date, your details, client details, service description, currency, amount, due date, payment instructions and applicable tax details. GST invoices have prescribed requirements; a generic template may not be compliant.

RECORD	PURPOSE
Proposals, agreements and change approvals	Shows what was agreed.
Invoices and credit or refund notes	Reconciles billing.
Bank and payment-provider statements	Confirms receipt, fees and dates.
Expense receipts and time logs	Explains costs and actual margin.
Tax-deduction records where relevant	Supports reconciliation with official records.
Foreign-client remittance documents	Supports cross-border review.

Questions for a qualified CA

- How is my specific work classified for the relevant income-tax period and which return or scheme applies? Do not assume every freelancer qualifies for presumptive treatment. [5]
- Do my circumstances require GST registration, and how should I invoice Indian and foreign clients?
- If I export eligible services, is a Letter of Undertaking appropriate, and what filings and evidence are needed? The GST Portal has an official LUT guide. [6]

This is general education. No blanket GST threshold, universal tax rate or tax-free treatment for foreign work is implied. Rules depend on the person, service, location, receipts and period.

16 / DELIVERY

Run a visible project workflow

The client should know what is happening without repeatedly asking for an update.

STAGE	EXIT CONDITION
1. Ready	Scope accepted, payment condition met, inputs complete.
2. Draft	Work follows the approved direction and requirements.
3. Check	Facts, spelling, links, formats and exports tested.
4. Review	One feedback list from the named approver.
5. Handover	Approval, agreed payment and final-file delivery recorded.

A small toolkit is enough

Use one document editor for briefs and proposals, one spreadsheet for prospects and money, one shared folder for approved assets and final files, plus the production tool the service requires. Choose tools that produce the correct deliverables and respect client access.

PROGRESS UPDATE

Completed: [items]. Next: [items + date]. I need: [specific input or decision] by [date]. Risk: [issue and consequence, if any]. Proposed adjustment: [solution].

Keep work and information safe

Use separate client folders, dated versions and backups. Ask for role-based access rather than passwords where possible. If using AI assistance, respect the client's rules, avoid entering confidential data in unapproved tools and check accuracy, originality and licences yourself.

Suggested folders: 01_Brief / 02_Assets / 03_Working / 04_Review / 05_Final / 06_Admin. Limit access to the files each person needs.

17 / HANDOVER

Finish in a way clients trust

A clear final delivery reduces confusion and creates a natural opening for future work.

Before sending the final link

- Count each promised item; check names, file types, dimensions and links.
- Compare product details, numbers and claims against approved inputs.
- Open the actual exports and inspect mobile previews where relevant.
- Document unresolved exceptions and confirm payment conditions.
- Check source files, licences, access and ownership against the agreement.

HANDOVER MESSAGE

Hi [name], the approved [deliverables] are here: [link]. The folder contains [file list]. Use [format] for [purpose]. As agreed, [payment/access detail]. Please confirm that you can open everything. Thank you for your feedback on [specific item].

Ask for feedback, then permission

Ask what was useful and what could improve. If a client praises the work, request separate permission to quote their words and show the project. Use their actual wording and preferred identification; do not turn private messages into public testimonials automatically.

REPEAT-PROJECT MESSAGE

Now that [project] is complete, I noticed [relevant upcoming need]. Would a [specific next batch] be useful for [period]? I can send a separate scope and quote if the timing works for you.

Close the admin loop: record actual hours and costs, reconcile payment, remove access no longer needed and retain or delete data according to your agreement and applicable requirements.

18 / IMPROVEMENT

Find the broken step

A slow pipeline is a question to investigate, not an instruction to change everything at once.

SYMPTOM	CHECK FIRST	TEST
Few relevant replies	Buyer fit and message relevance.	Narrow the group; personalise the first sentence.
Replies but no calls	Unclear or demanding next step.	Ask one simple question first.
Calls but no proposals	Need, budget or decision-maker unclear.	Use the discovery checklist.
Proposals but no sales	Scope, proof, timing and price fit.	Offer a smaller paid pilot.
Sales but weak margins	Untracked time and extra revisions.	Measure time; tighten scope.
Late payments	Funding and due-date rules.	Use written milestones.

Your weekly scorecard

Track qualified prospects contacted, relevant replies, discovery conversations, proposals, accepted projects, amounts invoiced, cash received and total hours. Keep invoiced and received separate. Do not infer a universal conversion rate from a small personal sample.

FRIDAY REVIEW

What progressed? Where did people or projects stop? What evidence explains the blockage? Change one part of the process next week, write what you expect to happen and inspect the outcome.

A performance benchmark is deliberately omitted. Buyer, offer, proof, channel and timing vary. Compare your own process while holding the rest reasonably steady.

19 / 30-DAY PLAN

A month of deliberate action

Use focused work sessions around your studies or job. Preserve the sequence even if you spread it over more time.

DAYS	ACTION	VISIBLE OUTPUT
1-3	Compare two services and choose one buyer group.	One service decision and reason.
4-7	Complete and improve two practice briefs.	Two honestly labelled samples.
8-10	Write offer, estimate costs and define a pilot.	Offer and price calculation.
11-13	Create portfolio and proposal template.	Shareable link, checked signed out.
14-17	Research suitable buyers and send tailored messages.	Qualified prospect log.
18-20	Follow up appropriately and hold discovery calls if available.	Call notes or improved outreach.
21-24	Send qualified proposals or simulate a new complete project.	Proposal or full practice workflow.
25-27	Deliver active work and maintain light prospecting.	Reviewed files and time log.
28-30	Complete handovers and review the pipeline.	Next-month plan.

If there is no client by day 30

Review page 21. Ask an appropriate buyer or experienced practitioner to critique the offer and sample. Improve the weakest stage and repeat a focused cycle. Do not invent a testimonial or slash every quote to meet an arbitrary deadline.

20 / WORKSHEET

Your one-page operating plan

Print this page or copy these prompts into a document. Revisit them at the start of each week.
